The whetstone route

PARTS OF THE TRIP follow the old road used to transport whetstone from Eidsborg to Lastein (the harbour in Dalen where the whetstone was shipped from). Eidsborg has been exporting whetstone for more than 1,000 years. From West Telemark Museum in Eidsborg you can continue on to one of the whetstone quarries.

Rui

ON THE STEEP SLOPES of the mountain above Dalen nests the smallholding of Rui, where the diminutive sisters Ingerine and Gurine once lived. The two sisters never married and lived together at Rui their entire lives. They lived frugally and were devoted to their farmstead and to each other. They only left the village once – to visit the king of Norway in Oslo. Journalist Knut Eidem describes the visit in his book about the girls – a story that made the two sisters known across the country. The Rui sisters always relied on the natural economy. They kept livestock and grew cereal crops and vegetables. They never bought tools – everything they owned they made themselves. The smallholding still stands, and most of it has been preserved just as it was when the two sisters lived in the modest cottage. Rui has magnificent views over Bandak, the Telemark Canal and Dalen.

Description of the walk

A CHALLENGING TRIP packed full of culture and history. The trip starts at Dalen Bryggje/the centre of Dalen (across the road from Dalen B&B). Dalen Bryggje serves as a docking point for boats on the Telemark Canal. The site has an art gallery and café. Ample parking. If you choose to walk from the centre of Dalen, you should pay a visit to the statues of the Rui sisters on display outside the tourist information office during the summer. They are depicted in their full size – around 120 cm tall. You will discover stunning vantage points along the way as well as historical sites such as Riarhamaren and Rui. There are information boards and resting places along the route. An alternative route takes you from the town hall in Dalen past "The Villa". This large, red building was the director's residence when the Molybden mines were still being worked. Take your time as you reach the hills. If you look around you, you will discover a fascinating flora with plenty of sun-loving plants. If Eidsborg is your destination, you could end the day with a visit to the splendid West Telemark Museum and its café. The museum is also home to Eidsborg Stave Church, one of the smallest stave churches in the country.

If you have any energy left once you reach Eidsborg, you could take a trip to the popular whetstone quarries. The history of whetstone from Eidsborg can be explored at the museum.

Driving directions

The trail starts at Dalen / Dalen Bryggje. If you arrive on route E134 from the east, leave the main road in Høydalsmo and follow route FV45 to Dalen. Dalen Bryggje is on the left-hand side just as you descend from Eidsborg-berget. After around 500 m you will reach the centre of Dalen. From Vrådal and Åmot on route FV38 to Dalen: arriving in the centre of Dalen, you will see Dalen Bryggje on your right after around 500 m. There is ample parking both at Dalen Bryggje and in the centre of Dalen.
